Ir al contenido principal Os Buscar en r/UFOs Crear

r/UFOs • hace 12 min
Garsek1

I saw a UFO back in 2012. It changed my life, and over the years I came to understand that the phenomenon is spiritual in nature. I have gathered all the solid evidence to explain it. Part 1.

Physics

IMPORTANT Note for the Reader:

Due to Reddit's character limit, I am forced to post this in two parts. Part 1 can be found in this post, while Part 2 will be in this one (https://www.reddit.com/r/UFOs/comments/1rhuu46/i_saw_a_ufo_back_in_2012_it_changed_my_life_and/).

The first part contains more of my personal perspective and less objective evidence, whereas the second part is quite the opposite.

Part 1 will contain the introduction to the post or article, the bibliography of links and sources (according to their chronological order in the text), part 2 is the more rigorous half—a mix of hard data and speculative theory, serving as a call to action for further investigation and some conclusions about all of this.

In any case, for the best experience, I recommend reading both parts (as they were written as a single piece) to understand the full context. Please feel free to analyze each source and its content to the best of your ability.

Greetings, everyone. I believe it is time for me to share everything I know here, in order to help others who are searching and have not yet found enough evidence to decide for themselves what this phenomenon truly is.

I have created this article to attempt to explain what it is, based on the most solid evidence available to date. This article is for EVERYONE. That is why it is so extensive. It is explained in a way that anyone can see and understand what this phenomenon most likely is, regardless of their background or educational level. This is why, in part, I have included multiple disclaimers and contextual sections introduced as quotes, with the aim of adding context so that everyone can see why this is important and holds a transformative potential for the world. This has resulted in a massive text, but something so complex—providing data for a general audience—cannot be explained in a small paragraph. I didn't want to split the text into two posts, so I decided to publish it like this, and here it goes. It will include a TL;DR at the end and an AI summary for those who want the most concise view without disclaimers or context. I have also decided to use Reddit's quote system to contextualize certain things and provide some of those disclaimers.

The purpose of this article is for everyone to understand why certain ideas do not hold up as well as others when explaining the phenomenon, and so that everyone can focus on where the real evidence lies.

To the materialists, scientists, and healthy skeptics, I must first ask a couple of things. The first is not to make a premature judgment. All of this is very complex, and I am not an academic. I ask that you verify the information, as is obvious, but I also ask that you cross-reference the ideological and philosophical details presented throughout the article, which I consider highly relevant from the standpoint of evidence. The second is that you try to read everything I am about to share from a place of understanding—specifically, understanding the context in which we find ourselves as human beings, as that has determined the way information was shared by the presumed non-human intelligences.

Ir al contenido principal

Crear

> exclusive moments. The rest has been entirely handwritten and not generated by an AI. Any part written with the help of an AI (Claude) will be accompanied by the following message:
>
> (The preceding part was written with some help from Claude Sonnet, but it does not constitute a direct and absolute copy-paste)

First of all, this is going to be a long post, so I ask the reader for patience. I will begin by listing all the sources I will be referring to, so they are easier to access, as they are the most important part and the foundation upon which the hypothesis I am sharing here rests. Below are the sources I rely on to build this article, in the order in which they are used as references:

1. https://www.bibliotecapleyades.net/sociopolitica/esp_sociopol_illuminati_55.htm (Philosophical)
2. https://www.llresearch.org/library/the-ra-contact-teaching-the-law-of-one (Philosophical/Cosmological)
3. https://www.nicap.org/papers/powell/Estimating.Flight.Characteristics.of.UAP-entropy-21-00939-v2.pdf (Ufological/Physics)
4. https://www.researchgate.net/publication/394040040_Aligned_multiple-transient_events_in_the_First_Palomar_Sky_Survey (Ufological/Astronomical)
5. https://knuthlab.org/papers/szydagis+knuth+kugielsky+levy-UAPx---2025 (Ufological)
6. https://link.springer.com/article/10.1007/s13194-025-00634-8 (Philosophical/Ufological)
7. https://archive.org/details/shellenberger-document-2023 (Administrative/Multiple)
8. https://ia801208.us.archive.org/33/items/TheVisionOfTheVedicPoetsJanGonda/The%20Vision%20of%20the%20Vedic%20Poets%20-%20Jan%20Gonda.pdf (Analyzes specifically the term "Dhi," the faculty of "vision" or "intuition" that allowed the Rishis to connect with universal truths).
9. https://archive.org/details/yogakarmarebirth0000phil (Academics discuss how Samadhi (deep meditation) acts as a refined "sixth sense." Scholar Stephen Phillips of the University of Texas has excellent work on this in his book "Yoga, Karma, and Rebirth: A Brief History and Philosophy").
10. https://www.youtube.com/@BasharChanneledbyDarrylAnka and https://www.researchgate.net/publication/378230261_Consciousness_is_Everywhereness_Expressed_Locally_Bashar_and_Seth (Philosophical/Cosmological)
11. https://www.youtube.com/@professorlaerciofonseca (Philosophical)
12. https://spacefed.com/biology/microtubule-actin-network-within-neuron-regulates-the-precise-timing-of-electrical-signals-via-electromagnetic-vortices/ (Neurological)
13. https://arxiv.org/abs/2401.11682 (Neurological)
14. https://www.sofiatopia.org/equiaeon/materialism.htm (Epistemological, Metaphysical & Neuro-Philosophical Arguments Against Materialism)
15. https://www.sciencedirect.com/science/article/pii/S0010945223002733 (Neurological)
16. https://www.researchgate.net/publication/286994471_Effects_of_Frontal_Lobe_Lesions_on_Intentionality_and_Random_Physical_Phenomena (Neurological)
17. https://youtu.be/EEMJoZvN-dQ?si=AqWnc_vDN0mg7gta (Neurological)

The first thing I want to recount is how and why I started all of this. I saw an inexplicable object back in 2012—a black sphere that later changed its shape during the event. This object was about 50 meters away at most. I saw it along with four other people, in broad daylight under a clear blue sky, and it definitively had no conventional explanation. Two people in the group were highly skeptical and were never able to explain what we saw. I won't recount the entire story in the main post because it is already too long, but I will do so in a comment within the thread. I believe the story is compelling because it includes a specific detail that one of the skeptical witnesses in the group could never explain.

Ir al contenido principal

Crear

akin to a "Star Wars" or "Star Trek" vision. However, since I saw that object, I entered an obsessive spiral to find an answer to what we witnessed. Personally, I consider myself the member of the group most deeply influenced by that experience. It changed my life in an indescribable way. It was the same for one other person in the group, but not for the rest; most decided to move on with their lives as if nothing had happened, which is perfectly fine. But I couldn't. When I say it changed me, I mean it from multiple perspectives. It changed me overnight in the sense that it threw me into an obsessive search for answers. But I also mean that, over the years, it made me see things in very different ways time and again throughout an extensive and complex journey in which I am still immersed—the difference being that now there are millions more of us involved.

From that moment on, I spent years searching the internet, discovering the UFO phenomenon and close encounters. At first, I took for granted that, if real, this whole phenomenon had to belong to a species or a group of species that perhaps had advanced so much they had achieved some kind of technology capable of manipulating the fabric of reality at the Planck scale. But I was still thinking in terms of "nuts and bolts." Perhaps something dimensional, like what Christopher Nolan's Interstellar later showed. I viewed the phenomenon more or less through those frameworks of understanding.

When you start digging, it's curious, because you will inevitably end up encountering what is known as the "woo-woo" side of the phenomenon, and most people coming from rigorous science or skepticism will leave it there. After all, it seems logical. All things being equal, if you apply Occam's Razor, what is more likely: that a guy talking about spiritual things is a fraud, or that he is actually channeling a non-human intelligence that isn't visibly present? It is a fact that many cults have been born around these kinds of ideas, and much suffering has been caused by exploiting these concepts for the purpose of control, dominance, manipulation, or theft.

So, I don't blame skeptics or others at all; in fact, that skepticism and rejection is something that happened to me multiple times along the way. However, over the years, I began a part of the search that allowed me to start connecting the material and spiritual dots with coherence. And it's curious because, over time, you realize that if you chase the phenomenon, you will end up at spirituality, the Ashtar Command, and similar things over and over again. It is inevitable. Regardless, I also want to suggest that it's worth considering that Occam's Razor might not be a valid rule in this instance, because you are probably not comparing a situation where "all things are equal," even if you might initially interpret it that way... And well, that doesn't exclude the negative things we've mentioned either.

> Disclaimer:
>
> I need to highlight an important nuance here. The "woo-woo" side of the phenomenon can be broken down into two categories: the first I will call the "natural" part, which arises from human society's own natural tendency to misinterpret and distort complex, encrypted messages. The second I will call the "directed" part, which is artificially constructed with a specific objective or focus—in this case, to manipulate social groups for specific ends.
>
> To illustrate: the first category would include "vibration" and things like "vibrate your spirit at X frequency to be happier or attract wealth." The second category involves things like soul-devouring reptilians, Sumerian alien gods, and the like. The distinction is obvious: the former is partly a religious belief held by certain sectors of the population—often used to make money off people—while the latter is engineered to induce fear, control, and hopelessness (and often involves political content). Personally, I never believed in that second, manipulative part of the "woo-woo" for a single second.

Regardless, I also found it almost impossible to believe in certain things about the spirit, vibrational energies, and so on; and let me tell you, it is true that much of that really is "woo-woo." As I've already mentioned, this is a fact born largely from the misinterpretation of things from the past out of which the New Age movement needs to better understand this phenomenon. However, I must warn everyone: there is a great, subtle, and complex truth in all of this, and I will try to present it as organized and coherently as I can.

Ir al contenido principal

Crear

I say all this so you understand that, for me, this entire path of understanding and searching has been a very hard struggle to carry. Life's problems—social, familial, economic—never stop. While you search, you have to battle an intense life-suffering that pushes you to abandon all hope and disregard any optimistic idea, especially those involving metaphysics and the like. This is compounded by extreme manipulation and misinformation that constantly tries to divert you and make you lose your way in the labyrinth. It's very nice to think that "everything is love," but I have to eat tomorrow, and I might live with person X or Y who makes my life a living hell daily—which often leads to a mindset of: "Don't tell me fairy tales."

But the truth is, I have never been able to forget what I saw that day with those people. That experience exerted, and continues to exert, such inertia over me that I simply cannot silence or control it. It is impossible for me. I have taken breaks at times, out of pure burnout, and it did me good, but I always came back. So I spent many years like this, trying to discern and filter, until one day I found a text online that made me see things from a different perspective. It became a personal "before and after" for me and my view of everything. It added coherence to spirituality and metaphysics, and that helped me move toward a new mental horizon within these ideas. Suddenly, spirituality and the phenomenon were being built and explained upon a certain (though still insufficient) logic. This is the text; it isn't entirely pleasant to read at first, but it becomes more engaging and fluid the more you read. Some of you might know it:
https://www.bibliotecapleyades.net/sociopolitica/esp_sociopol_illuminati_55.htm

(On Google, it can be found as "Dialogue with 'Hidden Hand', self-proclaimed Illuminati Insider")

> Disclaimer:
>
> I want to make a quick note to remind the reader to try and read everything until the end, if you are truly able to or are interested. Treat it as fiction if that makes it easier for you, but give a chance to the entirety of what I am about to post, which will be quite a lot... Do not let yourself be influenced by words like "Illuminati," as they are merely unrealistic concepts and ideas that do not accurately represent reality. Although there is some truth to them, they are not the way of seeing things that most closely fits what is actually happening. Keep in mind that all of this is just an introduction and that, later on, I will be posting real, consolidated evidence from an academic and scientific standpoint.
>
> I should also add that I am fully aware that this individual's credibility is quite low. However, it is about understanding the context of what they are explaining. This person operates within a situation of half-truths, predictive cover, anonymity, and more. It is not simple. Personally, I assume that—granting there is truth in what they say—it probably reaches about 50%, at least in certain matters, while the rest of the message carries a more manipulative or disinformative purpose. It is not about believing everything they say is true, but about temporarily suspending judgment to extract information and then comparing and evaluating it. If what they say were true, the very origin of this person is inherently dishonest and unreliable, so under no circumstances can everything they said be taken as gospel.
>
> I must also say that, in my search, I found further evidence that some of the things this person was saying could be real. But I do not want to involve that here, as it would introduce too much information for the sake of showing evidence (which is also not very forceful) that is unrelated to what I truly intend to communicate with all of this.

So, this guy from the Above Top Secret forum revealed some interesting things and mentioned an even more compelling text, which is the true bridge to understanding much of this. Later on, I will mention a few more; it is only by piecing everything together that one can obtain a decent overview of the phenomenon.

Ir al contenido principal

Crear

universe, its purpose, and our own.

To provide context, I will attempt to summarize the kind of cosmology this person was proposing.

> Context:
>
> According to the cosmology presented by HH, the universe is an unsolvable paradox born of mystery and through Will. In the beginning, there was a block of energy (non-material) with intrinsic characteristics: Unity, Infinity, and Consciousness. Since "nothingness" is neither theoretically nor materially possible, "Everything" therefore existed. This "Everything" existed in a state different from the current material universe (physical matter came later, and time as we conceive it does not exist there). Thus, because this block of energy possessed exotic and paradoxical properties, by its very nature, it manifested self-awareness. This is how Will was born, and it began to create a "game of experiences of being." This unified, infinite, and conscious block of energy is what religions know as God or the Creator. This is why "God lives within you" and also the reason why "God loves you." This Creator energy initiated a chain of rules (laws of physical mechanics) that allowed for a form of experience where existence can be felt from a point of view "separate" from God. However, it is all a game played for the purpose of creating experiences. This happens because, as an infinite being, everything is already contained within it; this leaves only two possible solutions: to self-nullify all existence or to foster an infinite search for new things (not just experiences, but literally everything). Since self-nullification is not possible—because the result would be nothingness, and nothingness does not and cannot exist—by process of elimination, the only choice left is infinite creation. Creating unto infinity.

So, that is essentially what I believe Hidden Hand intended to convey. Once I realized that this was a logical resolution to materialism, and that this type of cosmology opened the gateway to logical spirituality, I couldn't stop. I kept reading, and the text mentions another document called The Law of One, which serves as an even broader and more detailed introduction to the fundamental nature of everything that exists.

Note an important nuance before moving forward. Hidden Hand posted an image (you can see it within the web link) that, over time, made me understand something. He posted a GIF showing stationary points on a black background, and these points fluctuated through waves pulsing from a core. Later, I understood that this is called a Bessel function—a mathematical function that describes standing waves in circular or cylindrical geometries. And here is something fundamental that is worth absorbing for later: in particle physics, this is crucial because, at the quantum level, particles are not "little balls"; they are vibrating fields.

When I finished with HH, I began with The Law of One (hereafter LoO). And the same thing happened to me again from a psychological standpoint: I couldn't believe it. I'm sorry, I loved the theory, but it was impossible for me to believe in spiritual channelings of non-human intelligences through meditation. For those who don't know what LoO is, let me clarify:

"The Law of One is a series of five books containing a set of teachings allegedly transmitted by a non-human intelligence named Ra to a group of researchers in the 1980s through channeling, achieved via states of deep meditation. Its core revolves around one central idea: all existence is a single consciousness experiencing itself through infinite forms."

https://www.llresearch.org/library/the-ra-contact-teaching-the-law-of-one (This is free content).

It was very hard for me to break down my prejudices, but I couldn't stop reading. I assure you I spent many years in doubt and internal battles, through multiple re-readings, questioning the reality of this or whether I

Ir al contenido principal

Crear

> Disclaimer:
>
> Before moving forward, I want to clarify that while I was doing all of this, I was also trying to work, study, and exercise, all while my life faced many emotional and other types of challenges. This path has not been easy for me at all. I truly suffered a lot through it all, compounded by the derealization or depersonalization that comes with assimilating such deep and incredible ideas (which were backed by a real anomalous experience). These ideas shake your consciousness intensely at a relatively young age and within a completely antagonistic environment. They pull you away from social circles and isolate you from many things and many people. Fortunately, all of that passes, and everything eventually reorients itself in a positive way—at least in my case—and one ends up enriched by the experiences and the different points of view absorbed and assimilated. I say this mostly for anyone who is going through a hard time, who is suffering, or who is experiencing depersonalization or difficult moments in general—those who are affected by accepting this reality or who feel uncomfortable or uneasy in some way. I know this world is a harsh and unempathetic place. It is tough and difficult, but you are not alone. There will always be people who understand you, and never stop fighting because, at some point, things are going to get better. Truly, all of this will have a happy ending, one way or another.
>
> I needed to add that part.

Also, for years, I was simultaneously reading about UFO cases in every country and every era. I even found evidence of people who had seen or photographed exactly the same thing we saw, but at different times in my own country (Spain), as well as in different countries during the same period.

> Context:
>
> As I mentioned before, I will recount the experience in the comments below by copy-pasting a post where I shared it years ago. But to summarize: what we saw was a black sphere that also changed shape and acted with a certain degree of control or intelligence. It crossed the entire city where we lived, passing directly over our heads until it disappeared into the horizon at a distance of about 14km (9 miles) to the East (a few degrees North) from our position, over the sea (the Mediterranean Sea).
>
> https://www.abc.es/ciencia/20150119/abci-ovnis-espana-desclasificacion-201501182000.html
>
> This is one of the many pieces of evidence that exist. Another one I found—around 2014—was a photo from a guy on the beach who, while walking his dog and taking pictures, had captured a black orb. He uploaded a video to YouTube asking for help identifying the object because he had taken a rapid series of photos, and the object only appeared in one of them, even though each photo was taken less than a second apart. The channel belonged to the guy and his dog; it wasn't about UFOs or anomalous content, which made it very significant to me. That video is impossible to find now. In any case, many more existed before the internet and places like YouTube transformed into what they are today: mediums for mass disinformation and the sale of content at any cost.

But anyway, I believe there is more than enough evidence of this kind—especially considering recent events, from "Glowing Auras and 'Black Money': The Pentagon's Mysterious U.F.O. Program" to the latest leaked Pentagon video of an alleged object performing instantaneous acceleration, as well as Beatriz Villarroel's academic paper on pre-Sputnik transients. I believe there is already compelling and significant data suggesting that all of this could be very real, at least in part. Personally, I consider myself an open-minded person, and as such, I always leave room for the possibility that we might all have been deceived—that perhaps it is a massive intelligence operation and a great lie we have all bought into—but at this point, that seems like an unlikely option to me. I also wanted to state this perspective, as I am going to have to share some things that nullify

Ir al contenido principal

Crear

Here are some links that support the evidence and that many of us here are already familiar with:

- https://www.nicap.org/papers/powell/Estimating.Flight.Characteristics.of.UAP-entropy-21-00939-v2.pdf
- https://www.researchgate.net/publication/394040040_Aligned_multiple-transient_events_in_the_First_Palomar_Sky_Survey
- https://knuthlab.org/papers/szydagis+knuth+kugielsky+levy-UAPx---2025
- https://link.springer.com/article/10.1007/s13194-025-00634-8
- https://archive.org/details/shellenberger-document-2023/page/n86/mode/1up

So, moving back to the heart of the matter, LoO explains everything and satisfactorily connects (through logic) the spiritual reality of the UFO or UAP phenomenon with everyday reality. It also explains why the nature of reality is spiritual rather than material, even though in our daily lives or at first glance, it seems to be quite the opposite.

> Context:
>
> Here I will attempt to do the same as I did with Hidden Hand—summarizing a bit of what is detailed there. However, keep in mind that to get a true picture of what is shared in those books, one must read them; this is merely a crude summary to provide context, as the material is far too complex and extensive to be easily condensed:
>
> In LoO, Ra describes themselves as a collective consciousness entity from an evolutionary state different from that of humanity (though not in strictly Darwinian terms). Most of what is described is in almost total alignment with what Hidden Hand mentions in his post; however, here there is a much higher level of development and detail.
>
> Throughout the material, a series of claims are established—for instance, that we, as human beings, are on this planet by our own choice, and that this is something we decided before what we know as "birth." It suggests that this is a type of school that serves to learn and evolve consciousness from the perspective of having forgotten who we truly are, and that there is a series of natural rules and laws that serve our long-term evolution while we experience what it means to incarnate in physical matter.
>
> In reality, your "true self" is your soul or spirit, which is an individualized portion of the Infinite Creator (Holographic principle). In essence, only one thing truly exists and, therefore, only one law; all other laws are distortions of that original one—which is the Infinite Creator itself—like white light distorted through a prism. One of these, for example, is the Law of Free Will (or the Law of Confusion). This refers to the right of all beings to manifest any experience or way of being they find themselves in at any moment, without being interrupted in said experience to be "reminded" by others (an external agent, such as Ra would be to us) who are essentially the Creator themselves undergoing one more experience among the potentially infinite ones that can exist.
>
> Ra speaks of many more things, which I will mention later if necessary. However, that is the core idea.
>
> And this is why the message could only be shared from a purely spiritual point of view. They could not influence us in any way that would be seen as evident from the collective human perspective. This is also the same reason why UFOs behave in such a cryptic manner—allowing themselves to be seen, but only to a certain point, and always without ever crossing the boundary of what we consider real and verifiable.

This information shared in LoO possesses an absolutely consistent internal logic. It never contradicts itself; furthermore, many experimental scientific discoveries we have made since the 1980s have reinforced this

Ir al contenido principal

Crear

So, the matter doesn't stop there. When you read the entire material (it is necessary to have an open mind while doing so), you realize that its lessons filter into every interpersonal aspect of individuals in society and their relationships within it. You begin to see that what is stated there is verifiable and that it occurs in every act, including your own internal acts of thinking, feeling, and decision-making. You begin to see an underlying physics—a play of physical forces and energy involved in things. Responsibilities, desires, decisions, stakes... they all become energetic charges with polarity, and everything begins to be seen in a deeper and more meaningful way.

Well, that is something personal. Others might read the material and not be affected in the same way or perceive the same internal change I experienced. However, that is not the end of this material's relevance, as the internal change I mention (or the importance I gave it) led me to want to corroborate or debunk these books, their content, and everything related to them. In a way, to either confirm or deny. Only the truth matters, but also finding peace within it, whatever it may be.

So, many years passed, and I didn't always read everything with the depth I would have wished for. This is where I think we should make a collaborative effort. Those who are experts in field X or Y could corroborate or confirm certain things. But one reads, informs oneself, and does what they can; and over the years, I saw the obvious: that this material shares many similarities with other doctrines and belief systems, both contemporary and from the past. Taoism or Buddhism will likely come to mind for many. It is true there are similarities. However, the material with which it shares the highest degree of similarity is, as far as I know, the Mahabharata of the Vedic culture and certain aspects of classical Hinduism—Vedanta, Yoga, and others. The connection points here are quite strong, but despite there being several, I want to emphasize one that I found truly striking.

Within the Mahabharata, there are statements or dictums regarding the nature of the universe. In classical Hinduism, there were sages called Rishis—masters of meditation who knew the Shruti or "heard truths." According to them, these Rishi masters reached states of deep meditation through which truths of the universe were revealed to them—truths that were "heard or felt" rather than calculated or logically deduced.

- The document Vision of the Vedic Poets specifically analyzes the term "Dhi," the faculty of "vision" or "intuition" that allowed the Rishis to connect with universal truths.
- In Yoga, Karma, and Rebirth, academics discuss how Samadhi (deep meditation) acts as a refined "sixth sense." Scholar Stephen Phillips from the University of Texas has excellent work on this in his book Yoga, Karma, and Rebirth: A Brief History and Philosophy.

That is the most important detail, though I am sure there are more. However, here I saw a tremendous connection regarding some of the things we have been seeing in modern society and demonstrating experimentally in laboratories over the last decades and years. To begin with, the benefits of meditation are widely proven. It was quite unexpected for modern society to see how powerful "noise reduction" could be for the human brain, as well as the impact of positive and negative thoughts and other types of mental modulations we can perform within our heads. But the evidence is beginning to scale to a point I could never have imagined some time ago.

Many of us here have been hearing about "channeling" of non-human entities through the mind. I understand, obviously, why many are skeptical of this because, honestly, seeing how the world and society work, at first glance it is something ridiculous and unbelievable. It sounds like "woo-woo," and I get it. However, let me explain, and then I will present the solid, experimental evidence that is leading to the admission of a potential reality regarding this—though first, I need to make a brief digression on the subject.

> Context:

Ir al contenido principal

Crear

> with our experimental findings through science, both past and present. Personally, and as I have already presented, one of the most rigorous and difficult-to-debunk channelings of alleged entities is the Ra material, or LoO. But I also want to introduce Bashar (Darryl Anka) here as a potential element of interest who deserves attention. Another is a Brazilian physics graduate named Laercio Fonseca. Another is the Monroe Institute tapes. These are the examples I have chosen, as I consider them to have the most solid and consistent unidentifiable spiritual messages to date among a whole series of channelings and alleged contacts that share the same message with the same characteristics, though each is expressed in its own way. Regardless, others exist, such as Chico Xavier or Dolores Cannon.
>
> The point is that one of the things they all claim as part of their cosmology or philosophy is that, through states of deep meditation, you can access knowledge that is not reachable through the exclusive use of deductive logic or thinking reason. Furthermore, these states allow for contact with consciousnesses that are not materially present and that can offer guidance and diverse information.
>
> Bashar Channeled by Darryl Anka and Consciousness is Everywhereness Expressed Locally: Bashar and Seth
>
> Professor Laercio Fonseca

Alright, stay calm—we are leaving the "woo-woo" behind and moving into real science.

Part 2 here:
https://www.reddit.com/r/UFOs/comments/1rhuu46/i_saw_a_ufo_back_in_2012_it_changed_my_life_and/

Lo sentimos, esta publicación ha sido retirada por los filtros de Reddit.

1 0 Compartir

Únete a la conversación

Sé la primera persona en comentar

Nadie ha respondido a esta publicación todavía. Di lo que piensas y da comienzo a la conversación.

Crear